

Storyboards

One of the feedbacks that I got for my work was that it needed more details to create a whole story. Another feedback that I got was that they some of the sketches were hard to comprehend, and need to be more obvious to understand the story without reaching the text, My fellow students liked my story line, and thought it went well with my application, hence, I decided to stick with my storyline in my second iteration. Personally I loved this process because it brought my persona to life. Mental health is a real issue, and looking at the storyboard helps justify the cause of my application.
